WILMINGTON, N. C. FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1874

More About the Storm Some additional particulars in regard to the late storm came to hand vesterday.

Capt. Chadwick, of the stean tug Brand', which arrived here during the forenoon from Smithville, reports that was perfectly terrific in its violence at the tearth of the river. Much more rain seems to bave fallen at that point than was the case here, and as the location is a more exposed one, the wind was a most presistible in its vio I ace. The disasters were many, but portunately not very serious ones, as there is no loss of life, so far as is now known and reported. The Sapnish barque Lieira, which had been lving at quarantine for some time, was at Deep Water Point, about a mile this side of Smithville, hauled up to the shore, where she was engaged in d scharging her ballist when the gale s ruck her. She was blown upon the beach and then capsized by the force of the wind, fortunately without the loss of any of her crew, who all safely escaped to the shore. The steamer Waccamaw went down to her assistance yesterday, and hopes are enter-tained that she will be righted in a few

It is also reported that some of the pilot boats were stranded, but this needs confirmation.

The long warehouse used by the Government on the Garrison wharf at Smithville was blown over and the bathing houses along the beach were nearly all laid low, while trees and fences were prostrated in every direction in the vicinity of the town, No the capsizing of the barque Elvira have yet come to hand and we hope that there will be none to come. Some of the old residents at Smithville pronounce it the most violent storm that has visited their section for forty years

In Brunswick county it is true that there have been considerable damages sustained to the various plantations on the rivers but we are glad to learn that the loss is not so severe as was reported previously, and we are glad to hear that Colonel Taylor's loss is probably nothing like as heavy as we had expected. The plantations have all probably suffered more or less, but none of them to any very great extent. On Col. McIlhenny's by the blowing over of a huge barn, 72x40 feet, which was accomplished by rude Boreas in a very scientific manner, a loss which we presume can be repaired at the expense of a few hun-
